We hope everyone has managed to stay warm and safe in spite of the weather. Our fireplace is a popular gathering place on days when the thermometer drops.

With few people wanting to get out, our activities will be adjusted a little to keep things as in-house as possible. Nothing stops the Bingo players, though. Twenty residents gathered through the week last week, and the guy who says he never wins at the game can't say that anymore.

Claud Swart took first place for the week with Jesse Locke at a distant second and W.T. Bryan, Florence Smith and Judith Winn tying for third. There were also seven blackout prize winners, with Jr. Murphy on the list twice.

The Friday afternoon visiting group talked about New Jersey last week. Resident Viola Rich has a brother there, so they decided to learn about this state. Next week the group will pick another state to study.

It doesn't look like any groundhogs around here will see their shadows on Wednesday, so that means an early spring, right? This week I'm sure we'd all say bring it on!

This is my last Resident's Digest article, someone else will be sharing with you from now on. I have very much enjoyed bringing our highlights to all of our faithful readers. My best wishes to you all.

As always, keep in touch with all the good folks up here on College Street. I'll be back occasionally for the good coffee and conversation, maybe I'll run in to you here. See you soon.
